Women Elected to the Yukon Legislative Assembly

On April 3, 1919, amendments to the Yukon Territory Act came into force. One of these amendments extended to women the right to vote in elections for members of the territorial council and be candidates for election. At the same time the size of the council was reduced from 10 members to three and the annual indemnity for councillors was reduced from $600 to $400. The first election in which women could vote and run as candidates was held on February 25, 1920.

The chart below lists all women elected to the Yukon Territorial Council or Yukon Legislative Assembly. A member's term begins on the day the member is elected either in a general election or by-election. The member's term ends on the day the member resigns or dies, or the day before an election where a member is defeated at the polls or chooses to not run. Note that prior to the 1978 general election all members were elected as independent members.
